

Slug Table | .22cal / 5.5mm

Matthias | JungleShooterX@gmail.com | 2020-09-25

See the end of the document for explanations of the special features of some of the models: Tips (HP, Frag, LDC, Cavity) | Bases (Hollow, Pellet, Cup, Dish, BoatT) | Diameters (head sizes).
The specs incl. the BC normally is the data I gathered from the manufacturer's websites, or have been sent personally.

Stats (.22cal)

- 12 manufacturers shipping to the US, of which 7 are selling/shipping worldwide
- 379 variations (weight, diameter, shape) available to US customers, 51 of these worldwide
- Prices as low as 5 or 6 cents by NSA (with 35x variations), or 7-8c (H&N: 10x; JSB: 3x).
- Diameters: usually only .217 and .218, however NSA will offer 5 different diameters, so shooters can fit the slug to their barrels
- Weights from as low as 17.5gr (NSA) and 15gr (Griffin) and as high as 40/44gr (VK, Griffin) and 55gr (MHP)
- Extreme hollow points for expansion at lower impact velocities offered by Talon (frags!) and LFS

Tips and Hollow Point Cups

Cavity = Griffin 2-Stroke Cavity Point: A hollow point slug with a large hollow cavity (similar to Hybrid tip), with the following advantages: (a) hollow point expansion at lower impact velocities; (b) better BC bec. of a better form factor for its weight. Higher price due to two dies and twice the work

Domed = rounded head: No hollow point

Frag = Talon Fragmenting Slugs: The next step up from a deep wide hollow point and the LDC: A hollow point with predetermined areas of fragmentation, where the fragments crush much more tissue than a pass-through shot; price higher due to two-step process; developed by swish (aka Chad) and The_Long_Shot (aka Tom)

HP = hollow point: Unless noted the hollow point is on the narrow and shallow side, requiring a significant impact velocity in order for the HP to expand in the quarry

Hybrid = FX Hybrid Slug: A hollow point slug with a large hollow cavity (similar to the Griffin Cavity tip), with the following advantages: (a) hollow point expansion at lower impact velocities; (b) better BC bec. of a better form factor for its weight; developed by RatSniperSlugs

LDC = Griffin 2-Stroke Low Density Core: A hollow point slug with a polymer ball inside, with the following advantages: (a) hollow point expansion at lower impact velocities due to the ball pressing the lead apart; (b) lower weights; (c) better BC bec. of a better form factor for its weight. Higher price due to two dies and twice the work

Spitzer = long and sharply pointed head: Much longer and sharper than most “pointed” pellets; normally increases the BC

Diameter (Head Size)

For slugs, the mfctrs often state the diameter in imperial units (inches) – even though for pellets the diameter or head size is often stated in metric units (mm) (cf. JSB, H&N, RWS).

Abbreviations for the Head Size and Abbreviations-Table Below:

cvt mm = converted inches into mm

cvt in = converted mm into inches

abbr = suggested abbreviation, based on the metric size; H = head size

alt abbr = alternative abbreviation, based on the metric size

imp abbr = imperial abbreviation
